With plenty of positive response following their release of DSM on Nilaihah Records, Ad Inferna has moved quickly to their next album, There Is No Cure. This 2011 release departs from DSM and leads us into an album with a much darker and more club oriented feel. 'There is No Cure' takes it's listeners through a different journey incorporates their roots but also embraces the future. All of this goes to show that Ad Inferna are constantly changing and showing you a new level of their musicianship with every release. This album also features Kari Berg (formerly of Ashbury Heights) and Zombie Girl. The album was mastered by Vasi Vallis (Frozen Plasma, Reaper) with the remixes mastered by Sebastian Komor (Komor Kommando, Icon of Coil).

*Even if the music reveals a much darker attitude, you will still get the addictive and catchy synths that you got on "DSM". It's fast-paced with lots of energy. Their best work to date? Yes, without a doubt! 9 out of 10! - Blackvector Zine

10 out of 10! - www.uselinks.de

*A very spiritual and enlightening material, "There Is no Cure" evinces numerous genius tracks and creates a very pertinent, and appealing imagery in a universe of dichotomies and core antagonisms. Following the ideal scenario of a very solid composition to back up a very grave and rich world of creation and destruction, "There Is No Cure" stands out as a very mature album, and one VIVA MUSIC highly recommends to dark electro music aficionados. – Darkwave Magazine

*Ad Inferna have reached the next level, bringing their typical sound to perfection - and mixer Vasi Vallis has done a very good job! -Kolja Trelle aka SOMAN

*It's an extremely interesting album, one of the most entertaining I've heard for a long time. It's rare for songs to work as well in headphones as well as on the dancefloor in a club but these absolutely does. This album must be successful. - Magnus Kalnins aka COLONY 5

*"Influenced by themselves, their life, their experiences, their hopes, they don't even try to copy other bands but created their own, unique sound. This is very rare to find those days, as the copy & paste generation has entered the music market. Ad Inferna's tracks have this special mix of feelings. Harsh/Emotional, Violent/Peaceful, Scary/Hopeful. I had the pleasure to prelisten to "There is no cure" and I have to say, that this album was an inspiring experience in many ways for me. More powerful than DSM, more angry than DSM, very club oriented but still very emotional in its own way. I don't know where the guys take their ideas from but their source of creativity seems to be unfailing. Unique!" - Vasi Vallis aka Frozen Plasma, Reaper & NamNamBulu
