Distorted Reality are back - and with a stronger presence than ever! They took their already amazing sound, finessed it and experimented, defying genres. 'Daydreams and Nightmares' takes the listener through a 16 track journey and includes guest vocals by Julia Beyer of Technoir and Andreas Meyer of Forma Tadre plus a cover of "Rebel Yell" (originally by Billy Idol) and remixes by In Strict Confidence, Agonoize, Das Ich, Daniel Myer and Dust of Basement. Produced by Andres Meyer of Forma Tadre.

When it comes to sophomore releases, many bands struggle to either replicate their sound or go in another direction entirely. Instead, Distorted Reality returns with a signature sound that's stronger than ever. "Daydreams and Nightmares" had fans waiting for quite some time. Was it worth the wait? Absolutely yes! It's all here. The electro-ballads that were found on the excellent debut "The Fine Line Between Love And Hate", thanks to the soulful vocals of Martha Arce and Christian Kobusch. Yet somehow, it's different. The album stands tall with 10 brand new tracks (including an exciting cover of Billy Idol's "Rebel Yell") as well as 5 remixes, and a live version of "Rebel Yell". They definitely give 100% and plenty of tracks to satisfy those eager fans. The album artwork is also much brighter aesthetically than the previous record, and definitely reflects the introspective tone of the record. This is definitely up there with the top releases of the year so far. No one should be disappointed by this one! -- Sarah, Virus Magazine

Martha M. Arce sings brilliantly and even reminds a little of Alanis Morissette in her early years - when she was rolling over the stage and wasn't too focused on her vocals. Songs like "Something Wicked" (in which Martha sings more feminine/friendlier) and "Never Change" sound truly impressive. Special moments are when Martha is supported by Julia Beyer (of Technoir) on "Get a Clue" and the amazing cover version of "Rebel Yell" (Billy Idol). If this gig is the foretold of the new album 'Daydreams And Nightmares' than this should be a CD to look forward to! Probably one of the best performances of this WGT that I've seen this year. --- Beateuvil, Gothtronic webzine (Netherlands)
